

Welcome to the 2016 issue of the University of Utah's Undergraduate Research Journal. Congratulations to the students who have published their important work here—the Undergraduate Research Journal collects and celebrates the contributions our undergraduate students from all over campus make to scholarship in their fields.

We are pleased and grateful that the Undergraduate Research Journal continues to be hosted by the Marriott Library's e-publication system, which allows us to accommodate student publications of all shapes and sizes. This journal would not be possible without the dedication of Janet Opel, who, along with Office of Undergraduate Research team members Cindy Greaves and Stephanie Shiver, works to make the Undergraduate Research Journal the high-quality publication that you are reading today.

I would, as always, like to acknowledge the dedication and support of the faculty mentors who are committed to providing high-quality research experiences for undergraduate students at the University of Utah. The work published here represents countless hours of mentoring on the part of my colleagues all over campus—thank you for all that you do.

Happy reading, all!

Sincerely,

A handwritten signature in black ink that reads "Rachel Hayes-Harb". The signature is written in a cursive, flowing style.

Rachel Hayes-Harb
Director, Office of Undergraduate Research
Associate Professor, Department of Linguistics