The University of Utah S.J. Quinney College of Law, through the Wallace Stegner Center for Land, Resources and the Environment, offers a full-time, one-year LL.M. program. High academic performance, practical experience, work in related fields, and demonstrated potential for graduate level work are all considered in the selection of candidates. A prior law degree (J.D. or equivalent) is required.

The program requires completion of a total of twenty-four semester credit hours. Candidates holding a U.S. law degree are required to complete a minimum of 17 credits in courses from the approved list of natural resources, environmental, international, and related law courses, seminars and clinical work; at least one seminar requiring a major research and writing project; and the LL.M. seminar (2 credits). In addition to the requirements noted above, candidates with a foreign law degree must complete an introduction to U.S. law course (2 credits); one basic U.S. law course (3-5 credits); and a minimum of 15 rather than 17 credits from the approved list of courses. A thesis option is also available.

Financial awards and fellowships are sometimes available to qualifying LL.M. candidates.

An LL.M. candidate who is a resident of Alaska, Arizona, Colorado, Hawaii, Idaho, Montana, Nevada, New Mexico, North Dakota, Oregon, South Dakota, Washington, or Wyoming may qualify for resident tuition.
